

Professor Annamaria Girdali

Psychiatric Center Copenhagen, Copenhagen, Denmark

Professor Annamaria Girdali is Senior Consultant in Psychiatry in the Sexological Clinic at Psychiatric Center Copenhagen and Professor of Clinical Sexology at the University of Copenhagen, Denmark, where she also received her medical degree and PhD.

Professor Girdali has been involved in the field of sexual medicine for many years, educating medical students, nurses, physicians and psychologists in sexual medicine.

Professor Girdali has been involved in basic research on vascular and smooth muscle function in male and female sexual responses, clinical research on the pharmacological treatment of erectile dysfunction and female sexual desire and arousal disorders as well as in research on somatic disease, psychiatric problems and sexuality.

Clinically Professor Girdali works with men, women and couples with sexual dysfunctions and has worked with transgender care.

Professor Girdali has published more than 100 papers, editorials and book chapters in the field of male and female sexual medicine. She is Deputy Editor of the Journal of Sexual Medicine and has served as an Associate Editor for Sexual and Relationship Therapy and Sexual Medicine. Among her many professional affiliations, Professor Girdali was previously President of both the Scandinavian Society for Sexual Medicine and the International Society for the Study of Women's Sexual Health, where she has also served on the Board and Scientific Committee. In addition, she was Chair of the subcommittee on Female Sexual Health for the European Society for Sexual Medicine (ESSM), where she now sits on the faculty panel for the ESSM School of Sexual Medicine. Professor Girdali is President Elect of the International Society for Sexual Medicine.