

Hester Pastoor, MSc, graduated in 2000 in 2 psychological masters Clinical & Health Psychology and Personality Psychology at University of Leiden The Netherlands. Her thesis already addressed a sexological topic: dissatisfaction with penile size.

In 2003 she graduated at Leuven University in Belgium with a master of Sexology and at the same university in 2009 with a postgraduate study in Systemic Psychotherapy.

Since 2004 she is registered as a sexologist with the Dutch Scientific Society of Sexology. In 2010 she registered as a systemic therapist with the Dutch Society for Relationship and Family Therapy and in 2012 as a psychotherapist with the Dutch Council.

Since 2000 she is working in clinical sexology and sexual medicine; for the last 12 years now at the Erasmus Medical Center and University Hospital in Rotterdam The Netherlands. There she is working on a PhD concerning sexual function of women with Polycystic Ovary Syndrome which she hopes to complete in 2021. In 2019 she graduated with a master in Clinical Epidemiology at Erasmus University Rotterdam.

Finally, she is director of the 2-year Sexology training program in Amsterdam (in cooperation with Cobi Reisman) and president of the Dutch Scientific Society of Sexology.